

Two Worlds

V 1

You have seen the neon lights of Broadway distract me from a moonlit summer sky.
While you've taken time to watch the sunrise,
I've been lost in dreams of days gone by.

V2

You have touched the clouds upon the mountains and left your footprints on the virgin snow.
Standing still, I've tried to find the north star,
but failed to see the beauty here below.

Is the future always out of focus
when life is seen through different colored eyes?
As we fill our sails with winds uncertain,
two worlds collide beneath the endless sky.

V 3

When our worlds were spinning ever faster,
it seemed mine chased the moon and yours the sun.
Have we learned a lesson from the twilight-where night and day share space and time as one?

Is the future always out of focus
when life is seen through different colored eyes?
As we fill our sails with winds uncertain,
two worlds are one beneath a common sky.

V3

As we look ahead from where we're standing,
we see a road that forks through foreign fields.
Will we move ahead without a pathway and forge through lands our minds had once concealed.
